UPDATE

Can four students really make a difference at OBC?

The OBC Global Missions committee is out to do just that. "Missions is more than going overseas," says chairman Glenn King Leard, who has discovered that Canada is a mission field too. "We want to communicate a broader view of missions, with an equal balance between foreign and home missions." Christians and home missions is a ministry that need to minister in their own back yard too. Not to do so can be a trap out."

Colleen herself has had a real eye opener since coming to OBC three years ago from London, Ontario. She had never spent time in the "big city" before enrolling at the College. Now heavily involved in a So at Mission ministry to young people's 13 years of age in an Ontario housing project, she feels she's experiencing the reality of missions. "At OBC you're really encouraged to take a lead and take part in things that cause you to grow and gain part of an experience."

In her role as chairman of the missions committee she hopes to encourage this even more. Beyond organizing the Global Missions conference in January, the committee is also planning such things as visits to the many ethnic neighborhoods of Toronto, and other organized activities to increase awareness of the world, its people and its needs, starting with our own backyard — the community surrounding OBC. OBC!

Plans are underway too for a month-long mission project next May. Dr. Elie Stakane, who heads the missions department at OBC, states that the purpose is to enable students — not just those in the missions stream — but any students — to get a taste of a cross-cultural ministry in another country. They will travel to Jamaica and work both directly in ministry, teaching Bible classes to school age children, as well as in the rebuilding of homes destroyed by Hurricane Gilbert a year ago. Almost 50 students are already planning to go.

Hopefully events like these will become yearly events. The idea is to establish a fund to assist with the expense.

"Commitment to Excellence" campaign

Continuing in a Heritage of Excellence

Consider it an honor and a privilege to be associated with the "Commitment to Excellence" campaign because of the wonderful history of Ontario Bible College for men, a century and in more recent years the significant role of Ontario Theological Seminary in the education and training of Christian leadership in Canada. Although not a graduate myself, my life has been greatly enriched since early childhood by ministers, missionaries and many other dedicated graduates of both institutions. The system for training men and women for Christian leadership and ministry goes a long way, but at Ontario Bible College and Ontario Theological Seminary's history, since its beginning in 1894 as Toronto Bible Training Institute — the first Bible college in Canada and a school in North America — OBC/OTS has maintained a strong commitment to its original vision and continues to offer excellent theological education and training to two thousand alumni in full-time ministry here witness to this fact.

"Commitment to Excellence" is a campaign to ensure that this vision will continue to thrive in the days and years that lie ahead. It is a campaign to raise $2.4 million to provide new facilities, attract and retain excellent faculty, and to upgrade existing aging facilities. The faculty of Ontario Bible College and Ontario Theological Seminary work in these two institutions at considerable personal sacrifice. Although Toronto is one of the most costly places to live in North America, our faculty earn roughly two-thirds what they would earn in comparable institutions. The "Commitment to Excellence" campaign is addressing this issue. $600,000 of the total project is being directed to professional excellence. Those who have been on campus recently may have noted the need for remodeling, improvements to the heating system, and the need for extra classroom and library space. These areas too will receive attention in our campaign, as a total of $400,000 will be used for library expansion, remodeling, and other campus improvements.

Nowhere is the need for long-term investment more obvious than in the OTS building itself, when overcrowded classrooms and limited faculty office space have become a serious problem. The Seminary was built to accommodate 250 people. However, the student body has grown from 42 to just over 400 since it opened its doors in 1976, and is expected to reach 750 in the next 10 years. OTS simply cannot continue with such limited space.

"COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE" CAMPAIGN TARGETS

|-----------------------------------|--------------------|
| Professional Excellence | $ 600,000 |
| Seminary Building | 1,400,000 |
| Library Expansion and Remodelling | 100,000 |
| Campus Improvements | 300,000 |
| TOTAL PROJECT | $2,400,000 |

The major portion of funds raised in this campaign will be for the construction of a new, adjoining Seminary building. In addition, a hall of honor named after Dr. Oswald J. Smith, the founder of Peoples Church in Toronto and an early graduate of OBC, will be constructed between the existing College and Seminary buildings.

privileged indeed to have it performed for the entire OBC and OTS student body.

Dr. William Wan, vice-president and academic dean at OBC, visited York University on October 5 to present an evangelistic lecture entitled "The Relevance of Christianity in the Modern World." About 70-80 York students were in attendance as well as Gus Gonnella and Sean Ellott, two OBC students who accompanied Dr. Wan. The event was hosted by four Christian groups at York.

OBC missions enrollment has seen a significant increase, up from 18 last year to 30 this fall. "This is utterly incredible," says Dr. Elie Stakane, chairman of the OBC missions department, with a laugh and delight. This increase is especially surprising because missions enrollment has been dropping in Bible colleges across North America.

"Commitment to Excellence" Is People — GETTING INVOLVED

In David McDonald, campaign director

A story for the "Commitment to Excellence" campaign I have written over these past few months. By way of example let me relate some stories of people who have become involved.

The first time I received the report area of a lot of other business it looked like any other business. It was tastefully decorated with photographs and paintings on the walls, a polite receptionist greeting visitors, and a display in the middle of the room stating company policies. Completely unimpressive, however, was a pamphlet on that display, reminding employees and customers that this company did not do business on Sunday.

As I met with the president and two vice-presidents, all Christians, I soon discovered a willingness on their part to become involved in some way in the ministry of OBC/OTS. After looking at possibilities for involvement in the campaign, these three businessmen immediately recognized what they could do. As an electronic equipment needed for the proposed proposal being built in the new Seminary building, as a project of outfitting the entire room, does not always mean giving material possessions. Sometimes the person providing the service.

When the person providing a service campaign was being organized, a steering committee comprised of dedicated men and women got together to provide direction and guidance for the program. These individuals, all with many other business, church, and family commitments, felt strongly enough about the project to become the main driving force behind it.

Others too have given of their presence, time, and abilities. I remember one day

Christian Our Commitment to Excellence

It all began two years ago. Ontario Bible College and Ontario Theological Seminary took a hard look inward, then looked outward and decided to take some big steps forward. The result: "Commitment to Excellence," a campaign to raise funds to better provide for our faculty and to provide new and better facilities, so that we can move our confidently to fulfill the call of God to develop future Christian leaders in this country.

Although excellence has become a "buzz" word to many, we are taking it very seriously. And you, our commitment is not to pugn excellence. It is to Christian excellence. And there is a world of difference.

Pagan excellence is described in Ecclesiastes 9:10, as doing what we do, and all we want to do, with all our might, because we do not know the day of our death. Christian excellence, on the other hand, is described in 1 Corinthians 10:31: "Whatever you do, do it all for the glory of God," and Colossians 3:23 says, "Whatever you do, work at it with all your heart, as working for the Lord, not for man."

The difference is primarily a question of motive. The goal of Christian excellence isn't self-satisfaction, self-glorification or even self-fulfillment, it is pleasing God, glorifying God and fulfilling his calling in one's life. The orientation, simply stated, is spiritual, not physical or temporal.

When we embarked on our "Commitment to Excellence" campaign, I was reminded of these things. Often as we have advanced in our project, in uncertain moments and in the times when we have witnessed God's wonderful provision, it has been good to pause and remember that we have committed this project to the Lord and in every aspect of it we are seeking his will. We are committed to Christian excellence.

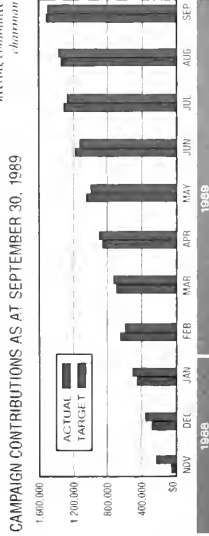

A Reason To Celebrate

God continues to work his marvelous will in the "Commitment to Excellence" campaign. As each month passes, we edge closer and closer to $2.4 million. To help us in our planning we set a target for May 31 of $1 million. At the end of May, we had met over $1 million in cash and pledges for the campaign. The next milestone was set for the end of September. We wanted to have reached $1.5 million by that time. I am pleased to say that we reached our target, and even surpassed it by almost $15,000. God is indeed to be praised!

Our next key training point will be in January. The goal is $2 million in cash and pledges by January 30, 1990. With you continuing to be those who are sharing in the commitment to excellence at OBC/OTS, our greatest challenge right now is to see pledges converted to cash, and to raise additional funds to meet our commitment to have 60% of the cash on hand before construction begins.

ses for such trips. Dr. Sikahone will expect students to cover their own travel costs, but would like to see money raised for room and board, as well as building supplies. This will give more students the opportunity to participate.

On January 25, the missions committee is hosting a Jamaican dinner (ves, real Jamaican food and entertainment) to raise funds for the mission trip next May (see p 4).

The goal of the missions committee is to encourage students to explore many avenues, not closing their minds to anything, and allowing God to lead them in things they may never consider otherwise. With the planning and effort they are putting into it, they should indeed make a difference at OBC. Says Colleen, "It's going to be hard work, but the Lord said, 'Hey, this is your year — so let's go for it!'"

Upgrading Existing Facilities

While the focus of the "Commitment to Excellence" campaign has been the need for a new building to accommodate the dramatic growth at the Seminary, we are also addressing other needs in our existing facilities. Upgrading will take place in the library, which both the College and Seminary share, and in the College building itself.

Put thousands of college students in a building for over 13 years and the wear and tear will be evident to all! Repairs and renovations to the student residences, lounges, and classrooms are becoming an urgent need if our job of training these people is to continue unhampered. Basics such as new carpeting, drapes, and beds are required as are more sophisticated things such as new audio-visual equipment.

At the very heart of any academic institution is its library. As our two most prior to one of our fundraisers for the campaign I received a telephone call that would brighten the day of even the most despondent campaign director. The person at the other end of the line wanted to know if the fund-bank was open for men when I said that it was for everyone. She replied "Good! My 11-year-old son without any expectation that she really would.

She did come, and she brought items for the campaign table, and that fund-bank was filled because this person had come.

There are so many stories of people getting involved. There are alumni in a lot of Chinese churches who hold a banquet to share about the ministry of OBC/OTS and about the campaign. There is the church that is so thankful for a leadership training which OBC/OTS has provided over the years that they feel compelled to be more involved in the campaign as a thank you. There are individuals and organizations who are having a team of fundraisers trained in honor of special Christian leaders.

There is yet another kind of involvement of like to tell you about right from the beginning it was recognized that only through the direct team and prayer of God could this campaign succeed. At all levels, from the top down, and at all levels, from the bottom up, OBC/OTS gather in small groups to pray, step by step, for the campaign. Others, like a former North American evangelist, are doing the same. People in Toronto, Vancouver, Nova Scotia, Toronto, and points in between are praying for God's will in this "Commitment to Excellence" campaign.

People are recognizing the need for leadership training to nurture, and develop officers in the faith, and they are looking to OBC/OTS to provide that training. That's why the "Commitment to Excellence" campaign came into being. That's why, when people are involved, that's why over $1.5 million has been pledged to the campaign so far.

Will you become involved?

- Pray for the campaign and those who lead it.
- Give of your God-given resources.
- Invite your friends to be our involved too.

Improvements in existing facilities will make a vast difference in student life and in the quality of resources for study.

Did You Know That... NO LITTLE KNOWN FACTS ABOUT OBC/OTS

Meeting the Neighbors

...your neighbor.
This letter comes as an invitation to you to meet your grey neighbor
from Ontario Bible College, Ontario
Theological Seminary

To see 30 people gathered in the cafeteria is not an unusual sight. So what made this occasion different? The answer lies in who was there and why. On Thursday evening, June 15 our neighbors were invited to come and learn about our plans to construct a new Seminary building.

Here's a concept of new OTS building.

While light refreshments were served people from the houses neighboring the OBC OTS campus heard about the plans for the new building and surrounding landscape. They were keenly interested in what the finished product would look like and how the construction phase might affect them.

Our president Dr. William V. Rae—also took a few moments to explain a little about the Christian faith, our history, and what those students who pass through the neighborhood have in common here to our students at OBC. Bob McRae, OBC's Theological campus facilities committee chairman and Dr. V. Rae were able to provide some key answers to probing questions.

As the evening drew to a close everyone left with a better understanding of the project and its impact in our neighborhood. Here at OBC OTS we were also blessed with an improved relationship with our neighbors.

Training for Relevant Ministry

Rev. David Collins, MTS 84
Pastor, Steeple Hill Community Bible Church
Peering, Ontario

I can still remember the thoughts going through my mind that first day of classes at OTS back in September 1977. I should be in the store trying to get the things I need for my family. I think I said, "After all I've got no Bible training so I'm doing a lot of things wrong."

Well, I'm happy to report OTS was worth the time and money I can say that with confidence because throughout my time at seminary, I grew spiritually in ways I had not imagined possible. Having done my undergraduate degree in economics while working full time, I liked the idea of being able to study and gain practical experience at the same time. It seemed to fit my style of learning. Added to this was the practical experience which others in the program, many of them pastors, brought in to the classes. I can still recall all the discussions that flowed from our classes on the pastoral epistles. There is nothing like having someone there to say, "Let me tell you how this works in real life, and to see the practical dimension of God's Word as it applies to you."

Along with the breadth of experience came diversity of theological backgrounds. How challenging and enriching it was to be able to disagree with other brothers and sisters and yet know that we share in the same wonderful fellowship. This opportunity to experience the diversity of perspectives has stood me in good stead on more than one occasion in my present ministry at Steeple Hill Community Bible Church.

One of the realities of ministering in a modern growing suburban community is the diversity of backgrounds that both present and future seekers bring to the church. It is a sad testimony when the community at large tells us that for all intents and purposes the church is "middle class" or "out of touch." It is an even sadder state of affairs if those who lead our churches are "out of touch."
Ministry preparation for the future, more than ever before, needs to recognize its responsibility to equip men and women to be relevant in our society. I am encouraged by what I see happening at OTS, and encourage the Seminary to continue to press on toward the goal of relevancy for today's world.

The "Commitment to Excellence" campaign is a strategic move on the part of Ontario Bible College and Ontario Theological Seminary to take action now for the future of OBC/OTS and of theological training in Canada. As in reliance on God, we lay plans for the next decade, we invite you to join us in moving forward with an enlarged vision of what he can do.

Increased faculty salary levels, new Seminary classrooms and offices, library expansion, and general campus improvements are essential to the continued excellence in theological training offered at OBC and OTS.

Perhaps God is asking you to take part in this project through a special financial gift. The entire $2.4 million we are seeking to raise over a three-year period is above and beyond normal contributions made by our friends and alumni. Please consider seriously your involvement in the "Commitment to Excellence" campaign. The response form is included for your convenience.
